- m. Quartermaster organization: 20 hours.
 - n. Aircraft familiarization: 24 hours.
 - o. Signal instruction: use of various types of equipment.
 - p. Automotive maintenance and driving: use of motor vehicles in the infantry.
 - q. Engineer subjects: utilization of mines and explosives in combat.
 - r. Armor: Its utilization, support and usefulness to the infantry unit during combat.
9. Only a small percentage of the enrolled candidates failed to pass the school or were flunked out for political unreliability. However, candidates failing to pass year-end examinations were permitted to retake an examination after six months, enabling them to be commissioned as officers or as NCO's and assigned to line units. Complete failures were assigned to line units to prevent them from being discharged and forcing them to serve two additional years after attending the school. In 1954 only persons with high school education were appointed to the school. In addition there were political appointees, generally sons of party functionaries.
